

CONTRIBUTORS

Travis Blemings is an Assistant Professor of International Relations at Temple University. His research interests include economic development, international organizations, and foreign policy. Dr. Blemings' current research focuses on the World Bank, the politics of development aid, and the determinants the World Bank's lending behavior.

Dr Fabio Capano is a historian of twentieth century Europe. His work focuses on nationalism, Cold War borderlands, and the politics of identity in post-war Europe. He received his Master's Degree in International Relations from the School of International and European Studies at University of Trento (Italy) in 2007 and his Ph.D. in European History from West Virginia University in August 2014. His work has been published in edited volumes and peer-reviewed journals, such as Modern Italy, Journal of Modern Italian Studies and Nationalities Papers. He is currently preparing a manuscript of his dissertation entitled Cold War Trieste: Nationalism, Localism, and "Italianità" in a Contested Borderland at the Terminus of the Iron Curtain.

James Meernik is Regents Professor of Political Science at the University of North Texas; Coordinator of the Divisions of Social Science and Director of the Castleberry Peace Institute. He is author of nine books, dozens of book chapters and even more peer-reviewed essays on conflict resolution, transitional justice, human security and democratization.

Jean-Pierre Murray is a PhD Candidate in Global Governance and Human Security at the University of Massachusetts-Boston. His research interests include global and regional governance, transnational organized crime (drug trafficking and human trafficking), critical security studies (securitization theory), migration, Latin America and the Caribbean. His dissertation research focuses on the securitization of South-South migration in the Latin America and Caribbean region.

Tobias Greiff is a policy and conflict analyst focusing on peace and security in the Western Balkans and the Assistant Dean for Academic Programs at the Elliott School of International Affairs (George Washington University). He is the author of Violent Places: Everyday Politics and Public Lives in Post-Dayton Bosnia and Herzegovina (Nomos: 2018) and Identität und Anspruch: Die Funktionen von Symbolen im Friedensprozess in Bosnien und Herzegowina (Tectum: 2010).

Jed Lea-Henry is Assistant Professor in at Vignan University's School of Management, Humanities and Social Sciences in Guntur, India. He is the host of the "Korea Now" and the "Popperian" podcasts. Related to the latter, his thesis is entitled, "A Poggean Approach to Mass Atrocities: Addressing Indeterminacy and Failures of Political Will for Humanitarian Intervention and the Responsibility to Protect."

Angela Heucher is an evaluator at the German Institute for Development Evaluation (DEVal). At DEVal, she works on the German human rights strategy and on gender equality in post-conflict contexts. Research for this article was conducted when the author was a research associate at the Collaborative Research Center (SFB 700) "Governance in Areas of Limited Statehood” at University of Potsdam and Freie Universität Berlin (2014-2018). At the SFB 700, she was part of a research project on the role of international organizations as external governance actors in the field of food security (“Talk and Action’: How International Organizations Respond to Areas of Limited Statehood”). She received her doctoral degree from University of Potsdam and was a research affiliate at the Berlin Graduate School for Transnational Studies. In her doctoral dissertation, she addressed the question of how international organizations perceive the organizational field of global food security governance and how they respond to overlap and fragmentation.

Andrea Schapper is a Senior Lecturer in International Politics at the University of Stirling, UK. Her research focuses on institutional interlinkages between the human rights and the climate change regime. She has published a research monograph on children’s rights in Bangladesh (Routledge), a textbook on ‘Human Rights and the Environment’ (Routledge, with Sumudu Atapattu) and journal articles, among others, in Human Rights Quarterly, Environmental Politics, International Environmental Agreements and International Relations. At Stirling, Andrea is also the Programme Director for the MSc International Conflict and Cooperation as well as the Co-Director of the Centre for Policy, Conflict and Cooperation Research.

Susan J. Siggelakis is Associate Professor, Department of Political Science, at The University of New Hampshire in Durham, New Hampshire. She is a Co-Director of the ‘UNH in Budapest’ Study Abroad program and a long-time officer of Beta Chapter, Phi Beta Kappa.