

CONTRIBUTORS

David den Dunnen is lecturer of international law at The Hague University of Applied Sciences in The Netherlands. He has an LL.M. from Maastricht University.

Tejal Khanna is a doctoral candidate at the Centre for International Politics, Organization and Disarmament (International Organization Division) at the School of International Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University. Previously, she has also worked as research associate at the National Maritime Foundation, a think-tank in New Delhi. She completed her MPhil in 2018, with a thesis on, Maritime Piracy and International Organizations: A Case Study of Somalia from Jawaharlal Nehru University. Her areas of interest include International Organizations, Maritime Security, Peacekeeping and Human Rights.

Silvana Lakeman holds a PhD in Political Science from the University of Bremen and now works in scientific publishing. Her research has focused on the involvement and inter-agency cooperation of organizations in the areas of migration, environmental and disaster displacement, climate change and disaster risk reduction.

Robert Oakes is a Senior Researcher in the Environment and Migration: Interactions and Choices (EMIC) Section at the United Nations University Institute for Environment and Human Security (UNU-EHS). He uses an interdisciplinary approach to investigate the causes and consequences of environmental migration and its governance.

Alanna O'Malley is Associate Professor of International History at Leiden University in The Netherlands. She has a PhD in history from the European University Institute, and her first book, The Diplomacy of Decolonisation, America, Britain and the United Nations during the Congo Crisis 1960–1964, was published in 2018. Currently, she is the Principal Investigator of a new project: “Challenging the Liberal World Order from Within, The Invisible History of the United Nations and the Global South (INVISIHIST)” funded by a Starting Grant awarded by the European Research Council.

Melanie H. Ram is a professor of political science at California State University, Fresno. Her research focuses on intergovernmental organizations, including their interaction, agenda-setting, and impact on domestic politics. She is published in Global Governance, Europe-Asia Studies, Ethnopolitics, Comparative European Politics, and Studies in Comparative International Development, among others. Dr. Ram has a regional specialization in Europe, especially Central and Eastern Europe, and is best known for her work on EU enlargement and Roma. Prior to her academic appointments and after earning her PhD at George Washington University, she worked on U.S.-Japan foreign aid coordination in Washington, DC.

Benjamin Tkach is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Political Science and Public Administration at Mississippi State University. His research interests include conflict processes, non-state actors, private-public partnerships, and government regulation.